1	anonymous	The national EMS is number is to be used instead of the need for an SSN. There is no reason for this number to also be included now. How can EMS providers be ensured that it is secure in any states database with the other info? It is much more serious to have that breached than any other info. Is the Compact ready to provide identity monitoring for life to all EMS practitioners if there is a breach? Has insurance been looked into for storing SSN? Think wisely about the implications. There are reasons that alternate numbers such as the FCCs FRN are used instead of the SSN
